calendar & annual report

A Gift of Plenty

How an unexpected bequest reaped many rewards for Western students.

It was an unexpected gift. No one knows why he chose Western. He was neither alumnus, nor staff member. He never taught.

What we do know is that Stanley Olson believed in the value of a technical college education and wanted to provide scholarship funding that would help students pursue their dream of a college education. He left a sizable bequest in his will for students at Western. His donation allowed the Western Foundation to create the Stanley Olson Emergency Fund. This fund allows for unplanned emergencies and expenses, like broken vehicles, heating bills, and unexpected medical expenses that can interrupt or end a student's pursuit of a college education. "With input from faculty, staff, and administration, the Foundation uses this fund to respond to unpredictable financial needs and keep our students moving forward in their education," says Peggy Langreck, Foundation development manager. So far, the Foundation has awarded nearly $4,500 in emergency funds to 27 students to help keep them in their classes.

The Stanley Olson bequest also allowed the Foundation to match $25,170 in scholarships, which helped 90 students. In a time when financial need is increased and funding is decreased, this is a welcome gift for so many of our students. "The generosity of Mr. Olson gives each recipient the financial backbone to earn a degree," says Langreck. "It gives them the resources to powerfully alter the course of their lives and envision a new future."
